Information from Med-El meeting in September

Maestro Cochlear Implant System:
http://www.medel.com/us/show/index/id/73/titel/MAESTRO+Cochlear+Implant

If you or someone you care about is affected by severe to profound hearing loss, the MAESTRO™ Cochlear Implant System from MED-EL may be an effective solution. A cochlear implant system is a medical option for individuals with severe to profound sensorineural hearing loss. For individuals with this type of hearing loss, hearing aids provide little or no benefit.

The VIBRANT SOUNDBRIDGE – Middle Ear Implant

The Vibrant Soundbridge was created to provide a solution for those individuals who were not candidates for cochlear implants but who also were not able to benefit adequately from traditional hearing aids. Unlike a hearing aid which only makes sounds louder, the Vibrant Soundbridge converts sounds from the environment into mechanical vibrations. This mechanical energy is used to stimulate middle ear structures for exceptional high frequency sound perception.

EAS Clinical Trial

The EAS™ Hearing Implant System is the world’s first hearing implant solution for combined Electric Acoustic Stimulation (EAS). EAS Hearing Implant System is currently under clinical investigation in the US. EAS takes a two-part approach: First, a cochlear implant electrically stimulates the nerve cells responsible for processing the high frequencies. Second, acoustic amplification is used to stimulate nerve cells responsible for processing low-frequency tones.

Sound, the Way the Brain Prefers to Hear It
Psychoacoustics has become an invaluable tool in designing hearing aids and cochlear implants, and in the study of hearing generally. "Psychoacoustics is fundamental," said Andrew J. Oxenham, a psychologist and hearing expert at the University of Minnesota. "You need to know how the normally functioning auditory system works - how sound relates to human perception." The field's origins date back more than a century, to the first efforts to quantify the psychological properties of sound. What tones could humans hear, and how loudly or softly did they need to be heard?
http://www.nytimes.com/2011/09/06/science/06sound.html?_r=1

Entertainment overcomes barriers of auditory training
Auditory training takes commitment, not just from audiologists who have to work intensively with patients over long periods of time, but also from patients themselves who have to spend hours improving their listening skills. The problem? Many auditory training programs do not live up to this standard, and patients often do not complete the program. Now, though, new computer-based programs are overcoming many of the barriers that have prevented the use of auditory training, reducing dropout rates and improving the effectiveness of auditory training. The key has been to make the process more engaging by using computer programs that provide face-to-face communication in noise while helping users improve speech comprehension skills.

Hearing Loss Association of Denver. Chapter meeting October 22nd at 1000 E. Englewood Pkwy, Englewood Civic Center. 1:00 pm for socialization and greeting one another. 1:30 pm program.

We had a great seminar in September put on by the Marion downs Hearing Center in Aurora. Lot of good information, wonderful presenters and grand venue. Your President was able to line up a future speaker early next year from the "cast' at that event. We also have two other speakers lined up for whom we are working to plug in dates of appearance early next year.

However, as we go to press we do not have confirmation for our program for this month. We are hopeful of obtaining a professional from the Hearing RE hab. Center to come and give us an update on new advances and developments to aid in our day to day communication. As soon as we get confirmation we will send out a notice to everyone either electronically or by phone.

If for some reason things do not jell for this month, then we will still have fun through a general discussion or forum wherein we share common issues. Letting each other know what things are working for you and where you are struggling allows us as a group to offer positive ideas for you. Through collective sharing it is amazing how things seem to happen, Lights go on and we are positively empowered. That is the reason for our existence: to support and share with one another. When we have done these "rap" sessions in the past, people have found them very helpful. So come and have fun. We will have some nice refreshments; there’s nothing like some food and drink to bind us together. See you soon!

Mohney’s Musings
By Debbie Mohney, HLAA Colorado State Coordinator

We had a wonderful Saturday in September of Hearing Loss Workshops given by the Marion Downs Hearing Center. The participants were able to participate directly in the workshops using clickers that allowed polling of the audience. This system is used regularly in college classes, and it allows for direct feedback from everyone. Interestingly enough, while many people do not have telecoils in their hearing aids, feedback from the audience at the workshops showed that over 90% of the attendees have telecoils in their hearing aids! This means that most of the audience is able to use assistive listening devices, including the audio loop that can be installed and used without having to pick up a receiver. Very encouraging!

I was able to sit and listen to all of the speakers as well this time around, and I thought the variety of presentations was a good well rounded set of presentations about Bluetooth and new hearing aid features, tinnitus, cochlear implants and implantable hearing aids. The speakers touched on so much technology and information, and the speakers all stayed for the whole session so everyone was able to ask questions.

Jim Detterline gave a wonderful presentation about his life with hearing loss, and all of the wonderful things he has been able to do. He has a Doctorate, has had an incredible experience around the world, has climbed Long’s Peak more than any other person, and has been a U.S. Parks Ranger with an astounding number of rescues and law enforcement successes. I climbed Estes Cone (a smaller mountain close to Long’s Peak) a couple of years ago with a group of deaf and hard of hearing teenagers in the Marion Downs Hearing Center Teen program, and Jim led that climb. I was proud to make it the whole 7 miles, and I can tell you that Jim is a great leader, and is so supportive of everyone around him. He does not let hearing loss slow him down, but instead uses it to his advantage. He shared his message to help us use our hearing loss to our best advantage.

I have said it before, but I think we are living in the best time to have hearing loss. I love music, and my hearing aids enable me to enjoy listening to my son play jazz saxophone, and I wouldn’t trade that for anything in the world. For me, being able to hear the sounds of every day life, my animals, and my friends and family, make learning about technology and everything it can do worth the time and money that I put into it.

Everyone is different and some people use other technology as their connection to the world. Computers and smartphones enable us to connect with people that was unheard of 20 years ago. We can chat or instant message with anyone in the world just by having a connection to the internet. Videophones have become a reality, as well as other video phone apps, such as Skype. Do you remember watching the cartoon “The Jetsons” and thinking it would be cool to be able to see the person you are talking on the phone with? We can do that and more today!

Voice recognition is becoming better and better and allowing us to have captioned telephone calls, and even captioned radio is just around the corner! I’ve even heard of a phone app called Google Voice that claims you can caption anything you are listening to, as well as apps that can display captions in sync with music that is being played. I touched on this last month, but I continue to be amazed at all of the technology that is out there!

The Hearing Loss Association of America 2012 is going to be in Providence, RI, June 21 – 24, 2012, so start planning today! Early-bird registration will be open by the end of October, so watch http://www.hearingloss.org/events/convention/registrationhotel-and-travel for updates.

Why Hearing Loops are Back to Stay

It's ironic and somewhat unfortunate that the special feature that has the potential to provide the most benefit for many patients is one that often receives the least attention. In fact, it’s entirely possible that the same audiologists who are concerned about the best DNR, directionally and feedback reduction systems might not even include telecoils in the majority of hearing aids that they dispense. The “potential benefit” I’m referring to is the use of telecoils with hearing loops. These loops could be installed somewhere as simple as the patient’s living room, or made available in public listening locations like banks, hospitals, airports, auditoriums, places of worship and taxis. The list could go on and on (and maybe some day it will). All the patient needs is telecoils in his or her hearing aids. For a variety of reasons, the U.S. is far behind many other countries in the use of hearing loops. But hopefully that is changing. One person who is making it change, room by room, in her part of the world is this month's 20Q guest author.

Sony developing 'subtitle glasses' for cinema use

Sony is hard at work building a special pair of glasses for cinema-goers that will display subtitles to the wearer without the words having to appear on the screen. For hearing-impaired cinephiles, the glasses will enable them to pop down to any screening rather than having to schedule their lives around special subtitled showings. “What we do is put the closed captions or the subtitles onto the screen of the glasses so it’s super-imposed on the cinema screen,” explains Sony Digital Cinema, Tim Potter.

Industry Attempts to Dilute 21st Century Communications and Video Accessibility Act

Lawmakers who spearheaded efforts to get makers of smartphones, tablet computers and communications services to better meet the needs of the disabled are pressing the Federal Communications Commission to resist industry pressure to short-circuit landmark law. As the FCC nears an Oct. 11 deadline for a vote on ways to implement the 21st Century Communications and Video Accessibility Act, commissioners are being urged by some key House and Senate Democrats to stand their ground. The lawmakers are concerned that segments of the tech industry want to win blanket waivers for some services, shield some products from the law’s reach and delay implementation of the law. “This sweeping new law is designed indispensable for full participation in the 21st century,” Rep. Ed Markey (D-MA) said in a statement to POLITICO. “My colleagues in the House and Senate have joined me in urging the commission to ensure that the implementing regulations are broad and do not delay or dilute the act’s provisions.”

Denver Center for the Performing Arts (DCPA) ASL Sign Language Interpreted and Audio Description Live Shows

The Denver Center for the Performing Arts provides American Sign Language (ASL) interpretation and Audio Description of all of our productions on select dates. We invite persons who are Deaf or Hard of Hearing to join us for these plays and we will seat you in an optimal location to view the interpreters and the stage.

When you purchase your tickets, please alert our box office staff that you would like ASL interpretation, so that we can secure appropriate seats.

Blind or low vision patrons can check out assistive listening devices for the Audio Description and large print versions of the Applause program magazine at the patron services desk in the Bonfils Theatre Complex and through house management at the coat check in the other theatres (photo id required).

For a Braille script, please call 303.893.6003 or contact jalexander@dcpa.org at least two weeks before the performance.

Western Colorado Chapter Free Monthly Meeting

No Meeting for September 2011

The Western CO Chapter held its last meeting on Saturday, Oct 1, 10:30-12:30 at the Center for Independence. We watched and listened to a captioned webinar from the national HLAA website: Hearing Research: New Devices, Treatments & Remedies You Can Expect, by Dr. Jack J. Wazen. This was a new and interesting way to share new information with our members.

In September, we were pleased to help host the quarterly Commissioners meeting for the Colorado Commission for the Deaf and hard of Hearing. It was great to know that deaf and hard of hearing people on the Western Slope are receiving attention from the Commission. After the meeting, the chapter sponsored the Community Open Forum with local panelists, including:

Linda Taylor
Executive Director, Center for Independence, Moderator

Denice Roberts
MEd, Instructor/Assistive Technology Specialist, ATP/Western Slope Technical Assistance Center (WestTAC)

William Higgins

Western Colorado’s October ITVS Community Cinema: “Deaf Jam”

Aneta Brodski is a deaf teen introduced to American Sign Language (ASL) Poetry, who then boldly enters the spoken word slam scene. In a wondrous twist, Aneta, an Israeli immigrant living in the Queens section of New York City, eventually meets Tahani, a hearing Palestinian slam poet. The two young women embark on a hearing/deaf collaboration, a performance duet that is a metaphor for the complex realities they share - generating a new form of slam poetry that speaks to both the hearing and the deaf.

Chevron is a proud sponsor of all the Western Slope’s Community Cinema screenings.

Northern Colorado HLA Chapter

No action on regular meetings. Since it is only me I am going to try meetings to targeted groups, such as veterans, audiologists, ministerial alliance, theaters, service clubs and point of service locations.

Things are moving forward with the City of Fort Collins; the Council on Disabilities sent my Proposal on to the full City Council with a unanimous recommendation to go forward.

Most of my time is in self education, how all of the auxiliary items work so I can at least understand what vendors are talking about.

I did attend the Hearing Loss Workshop on September 24 and found it very interesting and educational.

The Hearing Loss Association of America (HLAA) is pleased to announce the launch of its new website, www.hearingloss.org.

HLAA’s website serves as the primary source of objective information for 36 million Americans with hearing loss. The website underwent a major redesign to make it more intuitive, provide better navigation and to make it easier to find specific content in the vast collection of hearing loss resources available to all site visitors.

HLAA Executive Director Brenda Battat said, “We’ve made the website easier to use and packed with helpful information so that we can reach even more people looking for hearing health care resources and support for hearing loss."

The year-long project was generously supported by Cochlear Americas, a leading manufacturer of cochlear implants and Baha(r). "Thanks to Cochlear for making the new website a reality," Battat continued, "The end result is a robust site containing comprehensive information about hearing loss."

The website provides extensive information on the latest in hearing assistive technology; national advocacy work on Capitol Hill and before federal regulatory agencies; HLAA’s national programs including the annual Convention, the National Walk4Hearing(r), Hearing Loss Support Specialists Training, online webinars, and online communities for young adults and parents. Contact information for professional members including otolaryngologists, audiologists and hearing instrument specialists, can be found by visitors looking for a hearing health professional in their area. The site provides a directory of HLAA’s national network of chapters and state organizations, ways to support HLAA’s work, and much more.

About the Hearing Loss Association of America

The Hearing Loss Association of America (HLAA), founded in 1979, opens the world of communication to people with hearing loss through information, education, advocacy and support. HLAA publishes the bimonthly Hearing Loss Magazine, holds annual conventions (Convention 2012 is June 21 - 24 in Providence, Rhode Island), produces the national Walk4Hearing(r), hosts online learning with the Hearing Loss Support Specialists Training, holds monthly webinars, and advocates for the rights of people with hearing loss. HLAA has an extensive network of chapters and state. The national headquarters is located at 7910 Woodmont Avenue, Suite 1200, Bethesda, MD 20814. Phone: 301.657.2248 or visit www.hearingloss.org.
