

What percentage of hearing loss do I have?

Monday, October 24th 2011

Although many people talk about hearing loss in terms of percentage, it is not an appropriate or meaningful measure of hearing loss. Hearing is tested across many different frequencies or pitches, from low-pitched sounds like thunder all the way up to high pitches, like a whistle. It is very common to have more hearing loss at some frequencies than for others. Therefore, even if it were possible to quantify hearing loss by percentage, for some people the percentage of hearing loss would be different at each test frequency, making it virtually meaningless when describing the overall hearing loss. Hearing loss is not measured in percentages, except in specific legal situations where decibels of hearing loss are converted via a recognized legal formula to create a "percentage of hearing loss" for legal purposes only.

The generally recognized categories of hearing loss are as follows:

Degree of Hearing loss Audiometric Thresholds

Normal hearing: 0 to 25 dB HL

Mild hearing loss 26 to 40 dB HL

Moderate hearing loss 41 to 70 dB HL

Severe hearing loss 71 to 90 dB HL

Profound hearing loss greater than 91 dB HL

Note that the term "audiometric threshold" refers to the lowest sound level that a person is able to hear at a specific frequency. The higher the threshold, the worse that person's hearing is.

It's important to realize that the degree of hearing loss does not necessarily reflect the impact the hearing loss has on someone's life. A mild hearing loss can be significantly handicapping for some people, while a moderate hearing loss may not have a great impact on someone else. An individual's lifestyle, support system, and feelings about the hearing loss strongly affect its impact, even more so than the clinical diagnosis.

HLAA E-NEWS SEPTEMBER 2011

PROMISING RESEARCH on Cord Blood Stem Cells for Hearing

Promising research has led to the first clinical trial to evaluate the safety of cord blood stem cell treatments for hearing loss. According to a study [http://www.medicalnewstoday.com/releases/120350.php] published in Cell Transplantation, animal subjects treated with cord blood stem cells showed significant healing to the damaged sensory hair cells and neurons in the inner ear. Dr. James Baumgartner, pediatric neurosurgeon, and colleagues at Children's Memorial Hermann Hospital in Houston will launch the first FDA-regulated clinical trial evaluating the use of cord blood stem cell treatments for children with hearing loss.

The year-long study will follow 10 children, aged six weeks to 18 months, with acquired or congenital (but not genetic) hearing loss. The trial will be selecting only patients who have stored their cord blood with CBR for this trial

[http://www.cordblood.com/regenerative-medicine/form.asp?ref=hearingloss], to ensure consistency in the stem cell processing, storage and release for infusion.

Hearing Loss
Association of Denver

Hearing Loss Association of Denver. Chapter meeting November 19th at 1000 E. Englewood Pkwy, Englewood Civic Center. 1:00 pm for socialization and greeting one another. 1:30 pm program.

Rather than trying to meet on Thanksgiving weekend (4th Saturday), we have moved our meeting date a week earlier---the 19th.!

Also this month only we will be in the Altenbach room, which is located just to the left as you come through the South entrance to the library. That entry is directly opposite the free covered parking garage. As usual, the loop system will be operational and Diane will provide her superb captions for us as well. We are so grateful to Diane for providing this service for us. The Altenbach room is a little smaller (no kitchen facilities) so it just means we can be a little cozier if need be. We will do fine. Sorry, we will not be able to offer refreshments this month. However, they do permit food in the room so if anyone is worried about withering away from malnutrition before the end of the meeting, you are free to bring in your own coffee and snacks.

This month we are most pleased to have Dr. Stephen Cass back with us for an "encore." Dr. Cass is a professor at the University of Colorado and affiliated with the Marion Downs Hearing Center. He is one of the eminent physicians in the Denver area who performs cochlear implant surgeries. Many of you will recall that Dr. Cass was with us in January and gave a most illuminating talk on hearing loss and the architecture of the ear. This month he will give us a power point program on ototoxic drugs, a topic we have been pursuing for nearly two years. We know that you will find Dr. Cass's presentation most informative and entertaining.

One other reminder. Our annual holiday party will be on Saturday, December 10th, so be sure to mark the date on your calendar. It will be held at Emily Well's club house. Full details will follow via an announcement flyer to be sent out later this month. This is an excellent facility and we are most grateful to Emily for arranging for this!

Captioning on Apple TV

People with hearing loss seem to be among those who love the latest and greatest technology. Early adopters of email, IM, smartphones and text messaging, we are thrilled with world that provides tech solutions for communication problems.

However, not every new product delivers as much as we'd like or hope it will. One example of great technology that falls short in providing the kind of access some of us need is the Apple TV. According to the Apple website, the Apple TV is a device that allows you to stream programming over the Internet to your TV:

Everything you want to watch — movies, TV shows, photos, and more — streams wirelessly to Apple TV. That way you don't have to worry about managing storage or syncing to your iTunes library. HD movies and TV shows play over the Internet to your widescreen TV, while music and photos stream from your computer. Either way, all you have to do is click and play. <http://www.apple.com/appletv/#whatis>

That may all be true. However, if you rely on captions it may not be the product for you. This device apparently does support captions on programming from Apple's iTunes, and some other sources, but not on movies that are captioned via Netflix. Apple tells us they are aware of the problem, are working on it, and should come up with a solution soon.

Bottom line: consumers should always investigate any product before purchase to ensure that it can do what we want it to do – or at the very least, has a great return policy.

Mohney's Musings

By Debbie Mohney, HLAA Colorado
State Coordinator

Winter has arrived in Colorado! The snow started off heavy and wet, and broke a lot of branches and caused power outages. The weather forecasts have become much more sophisticated in the last decade, and while there is a bit of sensationalism in the predictions and reporting, the forecasts have become more reliable. I was ready for this storm, and luckily we did not have a lot of damage at my house, but others were not as lucky.

How do you deal with emergencies when you have hearing loss? There are resources such as television, and having a connection to the outside world via our family, 911, etc. Captioning is required on television emergency broadcasts, and violations of this requirement are hopefully becoming fewer, as stations are subject to large fines when they don't caption their emergency broadcasts. If we rely on captioning for phone calls, emergency situations can become trickier especially if a power outage occurs. We may need to have a network of trusted family and friends.

It's always a good idea to have an emergency kit assembled in case you have to move quickly. Keep medicines, food, water, warm clothes, and other essential supplies, such as hearing aid batteries, in an easily accessed place. Keep a set of items in your car. Identify a battery power source if you rely on devices that need power. Keep your cell phone charged and ready to go. You can find more information online to help you prepare for emergencies:

<http://www.hearingloss.org/content/emergencies>

It's not too early to plan on attending the 2012 Hearing Loss Association of America Convention in Providence,

RI, June 21st – 24th, 2012. This year's convention will feature Keynote Speaker Howard Weinstein; through his work with Godisa Technologies, he has produced three new products: a solar energy powered hearing aid, an analog solar charger, and a rechargeable battery. The Research Symposium will feature "How the Brain Makes Sense of the World of Sound", moderated by John Niparko, M.D. Wonderful stuff! Check out the convention at:

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT REACHES AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT SETTLEMENT
WITH H&R BLOCK

From: White House Disability Group
[mailto:disability@messages.whitehouse.gov]
Sent: Monday, January 31, 2011 4:54 PM
To: David Bolin
Subject: Justice Department Reaches Americans with Disabilities Act Settlement with H&R Block

WASHINGTON - The Justice Department today announced a comprehensive settlement agreement under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) with HRB Tax Group Inc., H&R Block Tax Services LLC and HRB Advance LLC (H&R Block) to ensure effective communication with individuals who are deaf or hard of hearing in the provision of income tax preparation services and courses at more than 11,000 owned and franchised offices nationwide.

The settlement agreement, which resolves an ADA complaint filed by an individual who is deaf, requires, among other things, that H&R Block furnish appropriate auxiliary aids and services, including sign language interpreter services, when necessary to afford a person who is deaf or hard of hearing equal access to the goods, services and accommodations made available to others.

"By signing this agreement, H&R Block has affirmed its commitment to providing effective communication with people who are deaf and hard of hearing not only at their tax preparation offices in San Antonio, where the complaint originated, but at their locations across the country," said Thomas E. Perez, Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division. "The agreement will ensure that individuals who are deaf or hard of hearing have equal access to tax preparation services at more than 11,000 offices nationwide."

The agreement requires that H&R Block:

- * Provide auxiliary aids and services, including qualified sign language interpreters, to persons who are deaf or hard of hearing when necessary to ensure effective communication of its tax preparation services, programs and courses;

- * Adopt and enforce a policy on effective communication with individuals who are deaf or hard of hearing for all H&R Block offices nationwide, post the policy on its websites and in its employee manuals, and distribute the policy to current and new employees and contractors;

- * Establish and maintain a list of sign language interpreter providers;

- * Post and maintain in a conspicuous location in all reception areas of H&R Block offices a notice stating that individuals who are deaf or hard of hearing have a right under the ADA to request a sign language or oral interpreter or other form of auxiliary aid or service if needed;

- * Provide staff training on the ADA and H&R Block's obligations to provide effective communication to individuals with disabilities;

- * Monitor franchisees' compliance with this requirement consistent with monitoring of compliance with the franchise agreements and other requirements of federal, state or local laws; and

- * Pay $5,000 damages to the individual who filed an ADA complaint and a $20,000 civil penalty.

The ADA prohibits discrimination against customers with disabilities by businesses that serve the public. Among other things, the ADA requires tax preparation services, accountants, lawyers, doctors and other businesses to provide equal access to customers who are deaf or hard of hearing. When services such as tax preparation involve important, lengthy or complex oral communications with customers, businesses are generally required to provide qualified sign language interpreters and other auxiliary aids, free of charge, to individuals who are deaf, are hard of hearing or have speech disabilities. Other auxiliary aids may include the use of relay services for telephone communication, exchanging notes for brief and uncomplicated communications, providing assistive listening systems and receivers in classes for attendees who are hard of hearing, and providing captioned videos. The appropriate auxiliary aid to be provided depends on a variety of factors including the nature, length and importance of the communication; the communication skills and knowledge of the individual who is deaf or hard of hearing; and the individual's stated need for a particular type of auxiliary aid.

Auxiliary aids must also be provided for individuals who are blind or have low vision, such as materials in Braille, large print or accessible electronic formats such as email or HTML, qualified readers and assistance in filling out forms.

Those interested in finding out more about this agreement or businesses' effective communication obligations under the ADA may call the Justice Department's toll-free ADA Information Line at 800-514-0301 or 800-514-0383 (TDD), or access its ADA website at www.ada.gov <<http://www.ada.gov/>> <<http://www.ada.gov/>> . ADA complaints may be filed by email to ada.complaint@usdoj.gov <<mailto:ada.complaint@usdoj.gov>> <<mailto:ada.complaint@usdoj.gov>> .

HLAA Western Colorado Chapter update – November 2011

Mark your calendar for upcoming meetings:

On Saturday, December 3, we will have a covered dish holiday social. We will have some games and events that will be designed so everyone can participate. We will adjust the time for this meeting only to 11:00 – 1:00. Details will be sent in the next newsletter.

On Saturday January 7, we will welcome William Higgins, Grand Junction Managing Attorney, The Legal Center for People with Disabilities and Older People (The Legal Center). He will be discussing employment rights and responsibilities for people with hearing loss. This session is for everyone, regardless of your work status. Everyone's input and life experiences will be appreciated.

News Release! HLAA WCO Receives Grant!

The Western Colorado Chapter of HLAA was awarded a grant from the Colorado Commission for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing (CCDHH). This grant will provide funding for CART at nine of our educational meetings. We are grateful to the CCDHH for providing this opportunity to reach out to the deaf and hard of hearing communities on the Western Slope. Please plan to attend a meeting so you can see for yourself how this technology can benefit you.

"CART" stands for Communication Access Real-Time Translation. A trained operator uses keyboard or stenography methods to transcribe spoken speech into written text. The Western Colorado Chapter uses Remote CART, which is done with the trained operator at a remote location. A voice connection such as a telephone, cellphone, or computer microphone is used to send the voice to the operator, and the real-time text is transmitted back over a modem, Internet, or other data connection.

Chapter Community Outreach Efforts are Underway

A small group of dedicated members met recently to discuss meeting planning and community outreach. One effort will be to create business cards that will be available to members for distributing to people who may be interested in learning more about the organization. If you are interested in participating in a future planning meeting, please contact Amy Becktell (see below for contact info)

In addition to our local monthly meetings, the Hearing Loss Association of Colorado's (HLACO) newsletter at www.hearinglosscolorado.org/newsletter is an excellent source of information. HLAA members will receive the state newsletter as a member benefit. Please let Amy know if you would like a printed copy of the State Newsletter.

If you are receiving this newsletter by mail, please consider signing up for the email version. Send your email address to hlaawco@gmail.com and we will take care of you.

Remember, you are not alone!

All HLAA chapter meetings are free to members and non-members, including family and friends. Sometimes the best part of the meeting is meeting other people who have a hearing loss and face the same challenges that you do. Come to a meeting, to share your information and learn from others!

Considering a text only mobile phone plan for people with hearing loss

September 14, 2011

Are you considering a text-only mobile phone plan for people with hearing loss? If you choose AT&T or Verizon, you can use your HLAA Membership Card to provide proof of eligibility.

Some of us with hearing loss spend more time texting or viewing email than we do talking on our mobile devices. Some service providers recognize that and provide plans that allow for more text and/or video than voice for people with hearing loss.

AT&T Wireless and Verizon Wireless offer wireless phone plans to people with hearing loss that may include data, text, video messaging, and/or IM, but charge for voice calls by the minute.

To qualify for these phone plans, wireless phone companies used to accept only a note from a doctor, audiologist or hearing health care provider. Now, at the suggestion of HLAA, these service providers allow people with hearing loss to establish eligibility for these plans by showing a membership card from several national membership organizations for people with hearing loss, including HLAA, as well the traditional method of seeing a doctor, audiologist or other hearing health care professional.

So, the next time you purchase a text-only plan, you don't need an extra visit to a hearing health care provider: you can simply show your HLAA Membership Card.
